This convinced me!

This picture in the Louisville Times (Ky.) convinced me, and I'm sure it convinced others, that we Americans have a great tool of friendship in our supply of surplus food. Here we are worrying about what people in other countries think of us and asking them to continue believing in freedom. Yet we don't use one of our greatest weapons-food!

Our government has made available through CARE millions of pounds of our food surplus for us to send as packages of friendship and boxes of hope. Let's all send one-or more if we can-to help hungry people abroad nourish their bodies and rekindle their hope. The world looks for action not promises. Americans are famous for action, so ...

Triumph By Defeat

Diplomats in the United Nations, like diplomats everywhere, become so preoccupied with what they are trying to do they forget to ask themselves if it's worth doing.

The affair of the great "package deal" that came apart at the seams is an example.

The diplomats wanted to spring certain applicants for membership into full membership. So they got their heads together on one of those quid pro quo deals dear to diplomats hearts.

They would let the Soviet Union wangle memberships for Outer Mongolia, Albania, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria if the Soviet Union would consent to membership for Italy, Ceylon, Jordan, Ireland, Portugal, Austria, Finland, Nepal, Libya, Japan, Laos, Cambodia and Spain.

At the last minute, Nationalist China, which has as much right to be on the U.N. Security Council as Laos or Outer Mongolia has to be in the General Assembly, vetoed Outer Mongolia and the Soviet Union vetoed the 13 non-Communist applicants.

It was a bitter blow for the diplomats. As far as everybody else is concerned, it would have been just as bitter a blow to have Outer Mongolia, which so far as anyone knows is not even a government, voting as a co-equal with the United States and Great Britain in the General Assembly,

For once, the diplomats have saved themselves from their silly preoccupation with silly schemes to outwit one anther. They have registered a triumph by defeat. If the United Nations keeps adding shadow governments, it eventually will turn into a ghost, itself.

When It Pays To Be Little

So many different things are being said in so many different ways about the possibility of a tax cut in 1956 that a taxpayer gets confused.

But the matter is simple.

Tax relief is the essence of politics in a national election year.

Both parties intend to give tax relief in 1956 where it will do the most good.

It will do the most good at the point where it makes the greatest possible number of taxpayer-voters grateful.

But they must not be grateful to the opposition; that would be bad politics.

Nor must they feel peeved at either party for fumbling; that would be worse politics. Hence, both parties must keep the situatoin in a state of confusion as long as possible. As long as it stays confused, no one can be grateful to either party. At the last minute, either the Democrats who control Congress or the Republicans who control the executive branch will make a clear.

firm bid for gratitude. This will be followed by a counter-bid from the opposition. If there is a standoff, they will try to split the gratitude. The little taxpayer can't lose. A tax cut for him is a certainty. He has the power of numbers at the polls working for him in a national election year, the one time when it pays to be little-and numerous.

Title Shufflers

The best part of being an elder statesman as old as Herbert Hoover is that no one can accuse you of having a personal ax to grind. At 81, a man's personal ax-grinding is over.

This means the latest in a long line of Hover proposals for taking kinks and obstacles out of the American presidency can be taken at face value. It calls for an executive vice president, to be named by the president and to serve with defined authority alongside the elected vice president.

But all proposals for easing the burden of the presidency share the same weakness. They do not take the behavior of politicians into account. Harry Truman has pointed out in his memoirs that presidents and vice presidents always will be in conflict because they the rivals for political power.

Neither can take the other into his confidence, therefore.

Each is jealous of the other and will do nothing to help the other's political prestige. This has been the rule since George Washington's time. If it seems to have been broken in the relationship between President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon, that is because Eisenhower never has needed to obey political rules. He is not a political careerist.

and Truman was typical, on the other hand; Roosevelt kept Truman in the political shade. When it was Truman's turn to deal with his vice president. Alben Barkley, he was more generous. But in 1952, Barkley wanted to be taken seriously as a possible nominee for the presidency.

That is why presidents are reluctant to get closer to vice presidents than the law requires them to be-because most presidents and vice presidents are politicians by trade.

The measures consist in the main of bottle-feeding; later on, they also entail supplemental feeding with baby food and still later with dog food. The current batch of pups now are in the early stages of bottle feeding.

Nazareth

Red Domination Ends In Village

Nazareth, the town where Jesus spent his boyhood and which Israel calls "Red," is celebrating this Christmas season by breaking the Communists' four-year-old political grip.

Until recent months, Christ's community was, on a proportionate basis, Communism's largest stronghold in the strategic Middle East, A combined movement by political, labor and religious leaders is breaking this political grip.

"Red Nazareth," as Israelis had dubbed the town, had returned a steadily rising Communist vote until it found courage in an election last July. Then, in a political upset, the Red vote count, which was expected to rise, fell from 43 to 35 per cent. Since then the Nazarene represtatives of Israel's tiny Communist party have suffered a steady decline in public

THE ENCOURAGED anti-Communist Christian, Moslem and Labor parties have mended past differences to fight the Communists under a common banner in city council. This coalition was able to defeat the Communist nominee for the mayoralty and elect an outspoken anti Communist, Amin Jarjura.

Meanwhile the Communists have been finding it increasingly difficult to raise funds as merchants take courage to resist their demands. Fewer and fewer Nazarene fellow travelers are flocking to the Reds' open-air meetings. Most serious for the Communists, however, has been the loss of moral support among the many Nazarenes who were formerly associated with the Greek Catholic Church.

The Greek Church has in recent months taken a staunch anti-Communist stand led by Archbishop Georgius Hakim, leader of an estimated 30,000 Israeli Christians of Greed Catholic de-

Speaking at a rally in Nazareth recently, the archbishop urged citizens of the ancient community to "wash out the shameful name of Red Nazareth which has stuck to this Holy Town for years."

NEW SOURCES OF WATER which for the first time in Nazareth's history will provide sufficient supplies for the populace have helped "wash out" the Communists. For years, they have harped that Nazareth was "deliverately forgotten" by the Israel government. It pointed to the lack of public utilities, especially wa-

An almost annual drought in the Galilee strengthened the Red argument. Two years ago, at the height of one such drought, the local Communists staged a half dozen "special" rallies which proved so effective they were repeated with almost equal success a year later.

The Israel government meanwhile began laying a new pipeline linking Uazareth to water sources in near-by hills. As Red strength mounted, the government pushed its work.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of the line's completion before last July's election was obvious. If the project could be placed in operation, a major Red arguing point would be eradicated.

· Several churches included special prayers for the speedy completion of the line. Israeli labor groups sped whatever skilled manpower that could be spared from other essential projects. One day before the elections, the line was completed to end a 2,000-year era in which women of Nazareth lugged water from wells to their

Foreign Minister Moishe Sharett personally dedicated the new line, and remarked: "Certain elements make a practice of calling black white and good bad. They do this because they know that they have nothing to gain if

Erysipelas

One does not hear as much today as one used to about the disease called erysipelas. However, I have recently had several questions on this subject including one from E. R. who asks for the cause of this disease

Erysipelas is an inflammatory skin disease caused by a germ known as the streptococcus.

It thrives best among the poor and those living under bad sanitary conditions. Also, it is most frequent early in life, especially during the first two years.

In old people it again becomes relatively common. Lowered general health from such things as bad diet, Bright's disease, or chronic alcoholism also favor the development of erysipelas.

It usually starts suddenly and is often accompanied by high fever. The most common location is on the skin of the face and head. Chills and other signs of a suddenly rising body temperature are usually present. At first the skin in a single spot seems to be affected - often this is where there has been a small wound or scratch.

The skin becomes reddened and swollen within a day or two, and usually spreads rapidly. A sharp line separates the reddened skin from the normal.

In the usual case, and particular. ly if the patient is in good physical condition, erysipelas clears up in about a week even without treat-

Meningitis, inflammation of the kidneys, and even blood poisoning, however, are possible complica-

Since the sulfa drugs and antibiotics became available, however, the chances of recovery have become much better. Several such preparations shorten the course of the disease and lessen the chances of serious complications.

The treatment consequently involves early diagnosis and the proper administration of a suitable drug. Erysipelas is contagious and therefore, the patient must be kept from contact with others in order to avoid spreading the infection.

Although erysipelas is not a disease which has entirely disappeared, it is certainly less common now than in the past in most parts of the world.

Furthermore, when it does develop it can be treated much more successfully. The fact that erysipelas has been almost conquered is the result both of better measures of prevention and of the dis covery of powerful new treat-

Probably the improved health, nutrition and housing of so many people has also helped to lessen the frequency of erysipelas.

Q-What might cause fairly new hardwood floors to buckle, as they have in our house?-L. E.

A-Dampness causes wood to swell and buckle. Kin - dried flooring readily absorbs moisture and should not be installed when surroundings are damp, unheated, or when the air is humid. This may have been overlooked when your floor was laid. Also if waterproof building paper was not instal led between the sub-floor and fin ished flooring, moisture may have entered the floor from beneath.

DOOR IN A CHIMNEY is the effect produced by recessing this entrance in the stone work that dominates this smart house. The stone work is continued around under the corner picture windows of the living room to form an attractive planting box. This compact and economical house contains four bedrooms and two bathrooms, two of the bedrooms and the second bathroom being upstairs. This makes it possible to finish the main floor first and expand the house into the attic when family growth requires more space. A small basement provides for heating plant, laundry and storage with the stairs leading down from the service entrance. This is plan H-420AP by the Homograf Co., 11711 East Eight Mile Rd., East Detroit, Mich. The house covers 877 square feet and contains 20,903 cubic feet.
